Col. Roosevelt's conditional refusal to accept the progressive nomination for president as sent to the Moose convention at Chicago is as follows:

I do not know the attitude of the candidate of the Republican party toward the vital questions of the day. Therefore, if you desire an immediate decision, I must decline the nomination.

But if you prefer to, I suggest that my conditional re-fusal to run be placed in the hands of the progressive national committee. # NOMINATION AS HIS DUTY, HE SAYS

Stands for Americanism and American Rights-Severely Criticizes Democrats' Mexican Policy.

The message of Justice Charles E liughes to the republican convention accepting the presidential nomination was as follows: Washington, D. C., June 20, 1916. Mr. Chairman and Delegates:

I have not desired the nomination. I have wished to remain on the bench. But in this critical period in our national history. I recognize that it is your right the Montpeller high school in the high to summon and that it is my paramount duty to respond. You speak at a time of national exigency, transcending merely partisan considerations. You voice the demand for a dominant, thoroughgoing Americanism with firm protective wage earners. Even the most conservaupbuilding policies, essential to our peace tive estimate of this expense and security, and to that call, in this risis, I cannot fail to answer with the average family savings in this country, pledge of all that is in me to the service he said.

At the outset of the administration the high responsibilities of our diplomatic intercourse with foreign nations were subordinated to a conception of partisan requirements, and we presented to the world a humiliating spectacle of ineptitude. Belated efforts have not availed to recover the influence and prestige so unfortunately sacrificed; and brave words have been stripped of their force by indecision. I desire to see our diplomacy restored to its best standards and to have these advanced; to have no sacrifices of national interest to partisan expediencies; to have the first ability of the country always at its command here and abroad in diplomatic intercourse; to maintain our rights under international law; insisting steadfastly upon all our rights as neutrals, and fully perform ing our international obligations; and by the clear correctness and justness of our position and our manifest ability and disposition to sustain them to dig-nify our place among the nations. I stand for an Americanism that knows no ulterior purpose: for a patriotism that is single and complete. Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we have but one country, and we do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance.

I believe in making prompt provision to assure absolutely our national secur-I believe in preparedness, not only entirely adequate for our defense with respect to numbers and equipment in oth army and navy, but with all thoroughness to the end that in each branch of the service there may be the utmost efficiency under the most competent administrative heads.
